TALBOT-WAGNER BLOC PLANNING FOR NEW DRIVE

To Align Assembly Behind
$24,000,000 Relief
Measure

OPPOSES THE "DOLE"
Measure Provides Sum Be Given Counties and Districts

HARRISBURG, July 7.—Taking the initiative again in a tense situation which developed as the Legislature prepared to conclude the second week of the special session, the Talbot-Wagner bloc today had laid the ground-work for a new drive to align the Assembly behind a $24,000,000 measure for direct relief.

Representative Grover C. Talbot, Delaware, late yesterday sponsored the measure which is similar to the $10,000,000 bill he pushed to enactment at the last special session.

The new Talbot measure provides that the $24,000,000 be given to the various counties and poor districts in the state at the rate of $3,000,000 a month beginning next month and continuing through March, 1933.

In no case can cash be given to applicants for aid, the bill specifically opposing the "dole."

REYNOLDS LISTED AS SUICIDE

Winston-Salem, N. C., July 7.—Smith Reynolds, tobacco prince, was officially recorded a suicide today. His Broadway bride was still prostrated today and authorities left her alone with her grief. It may be bad manners to question the demise of a member of the ruling house, yet throughout this thriving city, dependent upon the industries fathered by the Reynolds millions, there seemed to be an undercurrent of public opinion that everything had not been told.

TRAP FAILS

Camden, N. J., July 7.—A letter demanding $10,000 under threats of kidnapping and death was received by J. O. Wilson, prominent South Jersey attorney whose daughter and sweetheart were found shot to death in her bedroom three years ago, it was revealed today.

The letter was turned over to the Camden County authorities and a trap laid in Knight's park near Collingswood. Following instructions of police, Wilson drove alone to the park and deposited a dummy package under the tree designated in the letter. A half dozen detectives and constables were circled about the park but the trap failed when residents, seeing so many men near the park called the police. Police were uncertain whether or not the letter was the work of a crank.

TO SPEAK HERE

DENNIS J. MCGEE

who tonight will address a meeting of members of Bucks Lodge, No. 1169, Loyal Order of Moose

BRISTOL BOY TO SPEAK AT MEETING OF MOOSE

Dennis McGee to Tell Story of School at Mooseheart,
Illinois

ALL MEMBERS INVITED

Tonight at 8 o'clock, Dennis McGee, a Bristol boy, will address the regular meeting of the members of Bucks Lodge, No. 1169, Loyal Order of Moose. The meeting is to be held in the Moose home and it is believed that it will be of exceptional interest. All members are urged to attend and hear the story of Mr. McGee, who recently graduated from Mooseheart.

"Here is the brief story of a home boy who has made good. The story concerns Dennis Joseph McGee, of Bristol. There was a time—four years ago—when the future looked dark indeed for young Dennis. His father had died. Some believed that there was no help for the child but the cold charity of the world.

"But happily they were mistaken. It was discovered that the father had died in good standing in the Loyal Order of Moose. This fact changed the whole outlook for the child Dennis. What this change really meant to the orphan boy," according to Earl L. Brown, secretary of the local Moose Lodge, No. 1169, was this:

"Immediately after the death of Dennis's father, application was made to the governors of Mooseheart by the officers of the lodge for the admission of the child to Mooseheart, our nationally known trade and academic school near Chicago, in Illinois, founded in 1913 by Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, and maintained by the Moose fraternity. Since dependency was clearly shown the application was granted and Dennis entered Mooseheart in July, 1928. With him came his mother and his brother John and sister Ellen, all of whom are still at the child city.

"For four years," continued Mr. Brown, "Dennis McGee has been a student at Mooseheart, and has enjoyed all the privileges and opportunities of the Moose program of child welfare. This program, which is epitomized in the one word—Mooseheart—may be briefly stated in these words: Child Welfare to a Moose means for every child a good home, spiritual and moral training, and a sound education—both academic and vocational. This is the least!

"But these are not all the benefits that have come to Dennis as a Mooseheart student," continued the secretary. "In addition to a high-school education, in addition to a thorough training in the cement plant, one of the forty-five useful trades and vocations taught, he has also received a broad cultural education in literature, music, and art, and has learned to play the game of life through playing the game on the athletic fields of this noted child city."

According to the records, Dennis has shown conspicuous success in football and baseball.

BOYS BUILD FIRE ON BARN FLOOR; BUILDING IN RUINS

Youths Make Confession To County Fire Marshal
Stackhouse

WERE NEARBY VISITORS

Built Fire to Burn the Centers
Out of Corn
Cobs

Two boys have confessed to County Fire Marshal William L. Stackhouse that they started a fire which destroyed a large frame barn on the G. L. Schwenk Estate, between Blooming Glen and Dublin. The blaze occurred on the afternoon of July 5th.

The two boys, who are staying at the home of Mrs. Edith Gratias, who lives on a farm adjoining the Schwenk property, are William Kampe, aged 8, and August Olson, aged 12. The former had been at the Gratias home for about three years and the latter came to the place Saturday to spend about 10 days there.

According to the confession given to Fire Marshal Stackhouse, the boys shortly after noon Tuesday decided to walk to Blooming Glen and on the road they found some fire crackers. They returned to the house and got some matches from the kitchen and then went outside to explode the crackers.

Later, the confession says, the boys went across the road to the Schwenk barn and while on the barn floor they attempted to burn the centers out of a number of cobs in order that they might look through the cobs.

Following this, it is said, the boys built a small fire on the barn floor, but upon leaving the place, they said, they thought they had extinguished the fire.

A short time later the fire was discovered by Mr. Gratias, who said it apparently started in the section of the barn where the boys had been at play.

The barn was said to have been one of the old land marks of the community. Near the barn is located what for many years was known as Schwenk's Mill, where for many years farmers took their grain for grinding. The owner, J. P. Schwenk vacated the property about six years ago, when he and his wife took up their residence at the Eastern Mennonite Home at Souderton. Mr. Schwenk since that time died.

Firemen from Perkasie and Silverdale responded to the call and with an excellent water supply taken from the old mill dam they were able to save the mill, the residence and a number of out-buildings. The barn which had been vacated for a number of years contained several bales of hay, about four bushels of corn and an old farm wagon and these were destroyed.

The loss which is estimated to be $2500 is reported to be covered to the extent of $1500 by the White Hall Insurance Company.

Fire Marshal Stackhouse, who was assisted in making the investigation by Frank Stover, assistant chief of the Doylestown Fire Company, announced that legal action may be taken against the boys.

STILL PAYING TOLL

Gone are the old turnpikes with their toll gates spaced every few miles to make the traveler pay as he goes, but let no motorist fool himself that the toll road is no more.

The American Road Builders' Association has computed that the average motorist pays a third of a cent per mile for the use of the fine highways provided by a benevolent and patronizing government for his use and pleasure.

The only differences between the old system and the new are that, instead of turnpike companies building the roads with private capital and collecting so many pennies per mile from the traveler, the Federal, state, county and municipal governments are building them out of tax funds and loans and collecting the toll in the form of taxes and fees, with the motor vehicle owner carrying the big end of the burden.

When the motor vehicle owner registers a vehicle or buys a license he is paying a road toll. When he buys gasoline taxed by the state and Federal governments he adds a fraction of a cent per mile to that toll. Another fraction is added by tire, car and accessory taxes. And still another fraction is added in those states or communities where general revenue obtained from property taxes is used in the improvement of streets and roads.

Those near-sighted persons who expected to get something for nothing when the government took over the highway system may now pertinently inquire how the present "toll" compares with that once collected at the toll gates.

JAPANESE JINGOISM

Explanation for Japan's opposition to President Hoover's disarmament plan is not hard to find. Japan's government is militaristic, which means that the party in power must build up the army and navy if it would continue in power. The army smelled powder at Shanghai and in Manchuria and the navy is still chafing over the limitations imposed by the London treaty.

The island empire in the Pacific first joined in the disarmament conference with great reluctance, although more from groundless fear than from valid cause. The proposed reduction of armaments would not substantially weaken the Japanese navy nor cut her land forces. She would lose only her submarines and a few mobile guns and forty tanks. As she has never employed poison gas that clause in the program does not concern her.

Most of this opposition is raised as a smoke screen. The civilian populace in Japan must be kept in constant fear of invasion by sea and from all quarters or it might suddenly take the notion that the country needed a new pilot and make those jingoes in Tokio walk the political plank.

When the Japs and the French can show that the plan outlined would place them at the mercy of their real or imagined enemies, the plan will be modified to eliminate that unfairness, but it is difficult to comprehend how one or two nations will be placed at a disadvantage when all take the same reduction.

An evangelist says the depression has not reached heaven and yet they claim the world is getting worse.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

She couldn't take the bubble to the dining room, and she couldn't leave without him. She got one meal the first day, and one tray from the friendly steward, and that night, after the bubble was safely asleep she buttoned herself into her heavy coat, and went up to walk the deck.

Something about the limping gait of a small man who paced the deck slowly, ahead of her, arrested her attention. She followed, watching, afraid to believe her eyes. If it only were . . . but it couldn't be! And yet it was! It was!

"Tony!" she cried, "Tony Schiaffini! Whatever are you doing here! Oh, I'm so glad—so awfully glad to see you!"

His lined face lit up. "Lily Lou! It's you!"

"Yes, Oh Tony—I'm so GLAD!" She kissed him heartily. She was so glad to see him. But he flushed awkwardly, and seemed embarrassed, so that she wished she hadn't. She thought, "I've been with Nita Nahlman so long I'm beginning to act like her!"

But she clung to his arm. They walked the deck, then found a sheltered corner, and he spread blankets and rolled her up snugly. "Tell me every single thing that has happened since I left New York!"

He did not have very much news. He had just spent six weeks abroad. Oh, doing nothing particular. Just traveling around, but he had heard that she sang in Paris—"Yes, The other girl had to break a leg, or an ankle, rather, so that I could get the chance."

"I hear you were a lovely Micaela. In perfect voice."

"Tony, you DIDN'T hear that? Who told you?"

"A man I know. A producer, who may do something for me."

"You're going to have your chance! To-ny!"

"Yes, A fiddle in the orchestra at the Metropolitan to start. After that, concert master, director, composer, and you, Lily Lou, singing in the title role!"

He smiled, and she smiled, a little wistfully.

"I don't think my chance will come that soon."

He laughed. One of his rare, hearty laughs. "But you think mine will?"

She squeezed his hand. "I'm sure of it, Tony."

The staunch vessel made her way gallantly, surely over the waves. The wind blew strongly, freshly, from the salty sea.

He began to sing softly, beating time gently with his pencil. . . . "You like it? The aria. . . . It is from my opera, Balkis. And Lily Lou, one day you will sing it. . . . yes—no one else. Listen again. . . ."

"Pardon, Madame," the steward said. His white coat was like a signal in the darkness near the boat rail. "The baby, he sings, too. He wants that his mama—"

Lily Lou sprang to her feet. "Oh! I forgot—"

She ran into the cabin, clattered down the stairs, down the flights and flights of stairs, to the baby.

"Bubchen, darling! Was he forgotten! The poor, precious bubchen! Mother's here now, darling—don't cry. See! It's mother!"

And on the deck Tony Schiaffini stood where she had left him, holding onto the rail.

"My darn lame leg," he told the steward.

"These new mamas are forget sometimes." And then, every inch the competent French steward, he noticed that the lame gentleman was not quite himself.

"The ship, she rock too much, Heh? Eh bien, monsieur—you take my arm!"

• • • • •

"You didn't know I had a baby, did you?" she asked Tony, next day.

"No, I had no idea," he said. "I'd like to see the little fellow, that is, as soon as I feel up to navigating. I've had a little bilious spell—"

"Seasick!"

But she was sorry for poor Tony, looking so green around the gills. Terrible thing, seasickness. Last night Tony looked almost like a boy, and now he seemed old, and sort of off with life again.

"I tell you, I'll bring him up on deck for you to see! He's such a darling. And I know how you feel, because I was simply flat on the way over, but of course that was partly because I, well—I was going to have the bubble."

"Is that what you call him?"

"His name is Robin, but he was born in Vienna, and one of the sisters, or somebody called him the Bubble—it means little man or something like that—"

She stopped, because he seemed not to be listening. He kept tight hold of her arm. She knew what he was thinking. But she had made up her mind, there would be no explaining. People could think as they liked, take her or leave her.

"I did not know that you were married," he said, after a long pause.

"I wasn't. That is, not since you've known me. But I was married, before I came to New York."

"Husband die?"

"No—separated."

Another long pause.

"Didn't you go by the name of Miss Lansing, Lily Lou?"

"I don't know—I suppose I did—I resumed my maiden name. . . . why? Do you think I ought to—to—"

"Yes, I would. Mrs. Lansing, I think."

"Mrs. Lansing," she repeated after him. It sounded cheap, unreal. They had called her Madame Lansing, of course—everybody did—but that was different. "Mrs." . . . sounded like her mother. . . .

She did not know how tightly she was holding to Tony's hand, how innocently she was revealing her thoughts.

Tony surprised himself by leaning over and kissing her, rather clumsily, on the forehead.

"If you want anything—anything at all—"

He couldn't finish. Lily Lou had the sick feeling that he was offering her his heart, and his protection. . . . proposing to her. . . .

Poor Tony! Poor, sweet Tony! She mustn't let him. . . . Swiftly she turned the subject, assumed her most practical, matter of fact manner.

"I'm going to want lots of things, Tony. I've wired Gwin and he says I can come back to him, but I'll need help in finding a place to live, and I suppose I'll have to board the bubble. I haven't a great deal of money—"

They discussed it. Tony was matter of fact, and business-like, too. Probably she had been wrong. She looked at him, anxiously. Tony mustn't get to care too much for her. . . . poor old Tony. . . .

Tony helped her with the bubble the remainder of the voyage. He stayed with him while she went to meals. Pronounced him a beautiful baby.

Lily Lou beamed.

"He has your eyes," he said presently, "your lovely, long brown eyes, and the great sweep of pencilled brow. He will be a beautiful child."

She turned away. She had been thinking of his ears, his delicately molded chin. . . . like Ken's. . . .

• • • • •

She had been terribly afraid that people would pity her because she had a baby, draw away from her, perhaps even point her out as an outcast. It had seemed that way, at first.

But it wasn't so hard. She had to put him into a nursery at first, there was nothing else to do. But she made no secret of him, talked about "my baby. . . . you didn't know I had a baby, did you?"

"Heavens no!" Wanda Pillsbury said. "Didn't even know you were married!"

"I'm not. I'm separated from my husband."

Maybe that explained it, and maybe it didn't. She called herself Lily Lou Lansing, without any "Mrs." or "Miss." When forced to designate she said "Mrs."—"I'll be called Madame Lansing before long, anyway," she thought.

Dwight Gwin knew about the baby of course, but he did not speak of it for several days. When he did, it was as if he had always existed. She was grateful to him for that.

Tony went with her frequently on her visits to the nursery, dandled the baby, made faces to make him laugh.

Tony was actually a member of the Metropolitan orchestra now. It was heartening to see how delighted he was. He must have hated his job in the Bronx movie as much as she hated her first New York job in the chop-suey place.

While she was still at the Pennsylvania hotel where she had gone on landing, Maxine Rochon, in a neat blue silk coat suit and a new hat, called to see her.

"My dear, I've just heard you were back. I bumped into Wanda and she said you were here and all set to start work with Gwin again. So I rushed right over. I want you to come live with me again—"

"Oh! But I couldn't—Mrs. Manchester would never take—"

"Manchester? Oh, I split up with her right after you left. Frances got a job in Chicago and when I brought in Olive Hanauer—Olive's really a good egg, but a little lively—she had a fit. So the two of us walked out on her—just ahead of the sheriff, and Olive and I took an apartment on Fifty-seventh, right next door to where Manchester used to live—"

"Used to live!"

"Sure. She left for Europe right after. You didn't meet her by chance, did you? Well, anyway, Olive and I took this apartment—nothing elegant like Manchester's—a mere three-roomer, but neat and free, all but the gas and electric, and telephone—"

"Maxine Rochon! I never in my life saw such a girl for getting things free!"

"No? Well, you're not so slow yourself. You did pretty well by yourself, little Red Riding Hood, with your eight months gadding all over the continent at Madame Nahlman's expense, and then falling back on Gwin, with free lessons, and I suppose a salary again—"

"I didn't go after any of it," Lily Lou said, a little wearily, and with a trace of shame.

"All right, have it your own way. But what about moving in with me? Olive has left me. I could get someone else, but I'd rather have you."

"Oh, I'd like to come, Maxie, but when I get to earning a little more I want to have the baby with me. Oh! You didn't know about my baby, did you? Born in Vienna—five months old—"

"Yes, I knew. Wanda told me you told her. Gosh, I felt terrible. Ye gods, why didn't you tell me? I could have given you lots of help. You know I'm the eldest of five! Well—you certainly do give a person surprises. For a quiet looking little thing!"

Lily Lou looked at her, poised between tears and laughter. Oh, well! What did it matter? She laughed. It probably decided her future.

Bucks Gains Banner At State Convention

and contests, with Yardley the banner local; flower mission, with Makefield the banner local, and Yardley and Richboro the honor locals; and in the soldiers and sailors department, with Makefield the banner local and Yardley and Richboro honor locals.

The banner county in the state is the county that ranks the highest, and the banner local is the local that ranks the highest in the state. The honor county is the one that ranks second, and the honor locals rank second.

In the track meet, which was held Thursday afternoon, Bucks won the silver loving cup, with a total number of 59 points; Fallsington, 35 points, and Richboro 24. Lancaster County was second, with 12 points, and Philadelphia County third, with 8. The county won its track honors through the efforts of the following members: Olive Hartman, Fallsington Y. P. B., who won first place in the 50 yard dash, first in baseball throw, second in 75 yard dash, second in basketball throw, third in broad jump, third in high jump; Edith Ivins, Fallsington, first in broad jump, first in 75 yard dash, second in high jump; Florence Carver, Fallsington, first in high jump, third in baseball throw; Louise Traube, Richboro, second in baseball throw; Harry Davis, Richboro, first in 100 yard dash, first in 220 yard dash; Charles Overholt, Richboro, second in shotput.

At the graduation exercises, Marian Knudsen, Newtown, received a diploma for completing three books of the study course; Gladys A. Harper, Yardley, and Elizabeth Addis and Raymond Alburger, Richboro, received their first seals for having completed the fourth book of the study course; Margaret Daugherty, Yardley, received her first and second seals for having completed the fourth and fifth books of the study course, and Louise Traube, Richboro, received her third seal for having completed the sixth book of the course. Margaret Daugherty, Yardley, and Hannah Scheifer and Helen and Margaret Lamborn, Richboro, received certificates for being personal experts.

Miss Scheifer, who is state citizenship director, conducted a discussion group each day on the book, "Turn Towards Peace," and Miss Harper, national promoter of the Y. P. B. missionary fund, conducted a discussion group each day on the book, "Men, Women and God." She also gave a talk on extension lines.

The Yardley and Fallsington Y. P. B.'s had completed their flags and so participated in the pageant, "Makers of the Flag." Fallsington received the prize of the book, "Which Way," as their local had the largest number of efficiency members.

Those who attended the convention from Bucks County were: Florence Carver, Olive Hartman, Edith Ivins, Fallsington; Ruth Williamson, Langhorne; Marian Knudsen, Newtown; Grace Martin, Elizabeth Zetty, Warrington; Marguerite Beener, Margaret Daugherty, Yardley; Mary Robbins, Makefield; Hannah Scheifer, Louise Traube, Elizabeth Addis, Bernice Scott, Margaret Leedom, Harry Davis, Raymond Alburger, Charles Overholt, Richboro, and Gladys A. Harper, Yardley, who represented the county organization. Miss Harper was chairman of the resolutions committee. Bucks County had the largest number of delegates present. Grace Traube, Helen Hooley, Pauline Hooley and Arthur Blaker attended the banquet, which was held Friday evening.

Tragic End to Love Idyl

Following the tragic death of her husband, Smith Reynolds (above), son of the multi-millionaire tobacco family of Winston-Salem, N. C., Libby Holman (above), well-known Broadway stage star, who married the wealthy sportsman only last May, is prostrated by grief at the Reynolds home in Winston-Salem. Reynolds shot himself on the sleeping porch of the house almost within sight of his bride. Police are seeking a reason for his fatal act.

Get Your Money Back

"Bi-carb" and milk of magnesia only make your indigestion worse in most cases, for they weaken the digestive acid in your stomach, so it cannot digest your food properly. Pepto-Bismol does not upset your stomach. It relieves indigestion gently in a few minutes by stopping the souring of food in your stomach and the decay of food in your bowels. The medicines in Pepto-Bismol which stop souring and decay are four of the finest medicines known to physicians. Read them on the bottle. Also, Pepto-Bismol is not a patent medicine. It is a prescription by The Norwich Pharmacal Company, whose Quinine and other fine medicines have held the respect of physicians, surgeons, hospitals, nurses and druggists for nearly 50 years. If Pepto-Bismol does not get rid of your indigestion, distress after eating, heartburn and sour, acid stomach, in a few minutes, get your money back from your druggist. Delicious Pepto-Bismol is harmless. Price 50c. But don't be absent-minded and merely ask your druggist for "something for indigestion". Ask him for Pepto-Bismol by name. Look for the name Pepto-Bismol on the bottle. Refuse the unfair offer of "something just as good" which may hinder, instead of help your digestion. Ask for Pepto-Bismol by name and get what you ask for.

PAWLING NOW LEADING IN FISHING CONTEST

Bristol Fish and Game Protective Association is conducting a fishing contest, the lead now being held by Harold Pawling with a pickerel weighing three pounds, 11 ounces.

Pawling's fish was caught at Maple Beach, and is a large specimen for this section.

The contest was started off by the weighing in of a fish caught by Harry Ratcliffe. This, a pickerel, weighed two pounds. Ratcliffe's catch was soon topped by a pickerel landed by John C. Johnson, which tipped the scales at 2½ pounds. Pawling's was the third one to be caught and weighed.

Fish will be weighed for official records at Ratcliffe's store, 901 Garden street.

The annual outing of the association will occur August 6th at Maple Beach. There will be trap shooting, bait and fly casting, and other contests.

TULLYTOWN

CRESCENTS' MISPLAYS CAUSE THEIR DEFEAT

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
Result of Last Night
THIRD WARD, 4; CRESCENTS, 2
Schedule for Tonight
INDEPENDENTS vs. ST. ANN'S

(By T. M. June)

Taking advantage of Crescents' misplays, the Third Ward team won its opening game of the second half of the Bristol Twilight League last night on St. Ann's field, defeating the Crescents, 4-2.

"Dea" Still, who hurled for the losers, cannot blame anyone but himself for his defeat. He was charged with three errors and a wild pitch and each misplay aided the Warders in their scoring. Outside of those errors, Still pitched wonderful ball.

Still was charged with two errors in the first frame when the Pikers scored twice. D. Brescia received a pass, McGinley bunted, and Still threw wild to second, letting D. Brescia count and McGinley reached third. J. Dougherty bunted and McGinley scored. Massilla bunted and Still threw high to first. Massilla went to third on a passed ball. Brushia hit to Still and Massilla went out at the plate. Hibbs struck out.

Still gave the Third Warders another run in the fourth. Brushia singled to right and stole second as Hibbs fanned. Riola dropped a hit to center, Brescia holding second. Cole bunted and Still fumbled, all hands being safe. Cummons grounded out to Brooks, Brescia scoring.

The final tally for the winners came in the sixth. With one out, N. Brescia got his second hit, a single to left. He stole second, and went to third on Flynn's error. Still then scored the baserunner with a wild pitch.

"Reds" Cummons hurled for the winners and was masterful throughout. He gave up eight hits and would have had a shut-out if his support did not collapse in the last inning. His best work was in the pinches.

Errors by Massilla and Cole with a double by Still scored the losers' two runs during an uprising in the last canto.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and amk and the world looks pink, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blasts up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Allison Reaches the Peak

By HARDIN BURNLEY

UNLESS the play at historic Wimbledon has put Ellsworth Vines, America's ranking player and captain of the Davis Cup Team, back into the form which won him the national championship last year, the weight of carrying the team to victory in the interzone finals at Paris may rest upon Wilmer Allison, of Texas.

Allison, who has been playing brilliant tennis this year, seems to have at last begun to justify the great things predicted for him several years ago when he defeated Henri Cochet at Wimbledon. In the recent Davis Cup matches against Brazil he and Van Ryn dissolved their doubles partnership temporarily to clean up the final singles matches. A few days later the Americans sailed for England in the wake of Vines who had left to get an early start for the Wimbledon tournament.

Right now many tennis authorities look upon Allison as the key to the success of the American team. For consistent playing he is far and away ahead of the other members of the team, at least this year. He and Van Ryn as a doubles combination, undoubtedly surpass any other combination that can be sent against them abroad. Should the American team prove successful in the interzone finals at Paris, beginning on July 22, (probably against the English team), it is difficult to visualize any doubles team the French may select beating Allison and Van Ryn. They are almost a certainty to score the doubles points for America.

It is in the singles matches that most of the concern is felt. Particularly since Vines' "in and out" playing this year, Shields, the other singles member of the team, is also a bit off his game. Thus it is that Allison may have to carry an extra burden in the matches at Paris.

The tall Texan may be called upon to play in the singles in addition to the doubles. Quite a task for anyone and Allison is not too well fitted for the job, physically. Karol Kozeluh, famous professional star, is of the opinion that Allison would be one of the greatest singles players in the world if he was better endowed with stamina. Which may explain why Allison has devoted much of his play to the less strenuous doubles matches.

Should Allison play in the singles against England it is possible that he will hook up with the brilliant Bunny Austin of the English team. And the latter will be a tough nut to crack for Allison, Vines or Shields. The little Britis-her has been playing great tennis and is the hope of the English team.

Anyway this seems to be Allison's year and as a singles player or in the doubles he is sure to shine for America.
